DIRECTOR OF IMPACT SAFE HOUSE PROJECT

Emily Brown serves as the Director of Impact for Safe House Project, managing their fundraising, marketing, and donor relations initiatives. Emily started her career in nonprofit marketing and fundraising for a MD-based addiction recovery and homeless services program before moving into corporate and agency marketing leadership. She then opened her own marketing consulting firm, RIZU Marketing, helping businesses advance their mission and meet revenue goals through consistent brand and marketing strategy and messaging. Emily specializes in helping to simplify and clarify unique value propositions and build and execute campaigns, content, and brand experiences that engage and activate audiences.

Emily is married to her amazingly talented musician husband, Jason, and together they have a beautiful daughter and unruly cat. They reside in Virginia Beach, VA. She is naturally a people connector and loves planning get-togethers and outings for her friends and family. When she's not working or planning events, she enjoys being outside and "supporting local" through trying out coffee shops and happy hours, exploring small businesses, or enjoying a Groupon massage. She'd love to meet you and learn more about your passions and how you can get plugged into the mission of SHP!
